

STORM UNICORN REPORT WRITING - AUTUMN 2014

Oak Class have undertaken an engaging and highly imaginative unit of work based upon Pie Corbett's fantastical, mythological beasts; unicorns.

We looked at ways to construct non-chronological reports which would thoroughly engage our readers.

How do you think we did?

Read some of our reports below.

Marking Criteria

Have I used topic sentences to tell the reader what the paragraph is about?

Have I used adverb starters to highlight to the reader how I might feel when reading the information?

Have I used connectives to add in extra information?

Have I used a hook/ generaliser to keep my reader engaged?

Am I proud of this work?

FLOWER UNICORN

REPORT-

A unicorn is a type of mythical horse with magical properties. There are many different types, all with unique powers. This report focuses on one species, probably the strangest and rarest of all: its name, the Flower unicorn. Not much is known about this fascinating creature, so how can this report have been made? Well, travelling around and pulling together tiny scraps of information created this amazing report. Read on and discover the once hidden world of the Flower unicorn...

APPEARANCE

All unicorns have roughly the same appearance. They all have a tail, mane, body, hooves and of course, a horn. Unsurprisingly, they all have different colours which makes each species stand out. Nearly all unicorns are a silver or gold colour. Flower unicorns on the other hand, are transparent, but they don't look it. Only when they've recently eaten can you see through them. Unicorns have boring, 'normalish' manes, although a few have ones with magical properties. The Flower unicorn's mane and tail has flowers woven in, and consequently have the power to keep any flower it touches from dying, even through the long, harsh winter. Flower unicorn's hooves are the only ones made of flowers and magic moulded together. Additionally, they smell of flower juices and feel springy and velvety. The horn of the Flower unicorn is swirling with every colour of the rainbow and more.

HABITAT

Not unlike the common unicorn, the Flower unicorn prefers to live in sunny, flowery places, such as a field or wood. A Flower unicorn will settle for a dark, dank wood, for they can fill it with life with one blast of its horn. Flower unicorns mainly sleep in thick bushes, although, if you're lucky, you may see one dozing on a bed of flowers. These are usually the juveniles (young ones), for they haven't encountered the evil of humans just yet. Unfortunately, this means that the young are hunted easily.

DIET

The Flower unicorn is unique to all other unicorns in the way it feeds. Instead of putting it's head down and grazing. _
